

Dear Educators and Coordinators:

A love of reading offers the foundation of literacy skills that builds social and emotional success for all children. Helping children succeed and communities prosper in your neighborhood is the commitment of our program.

We believe that if a child can read, then that child can do anything, dream anything, achieve anything. Our goal is to ensure that all children have books at school and at home.

Each book set is selected for high quality and age appropriateness and will inspire a love of books, shared reading time and learning – about diversity of people, empathy, kindness, and compassion. These book sets will promote self-esteem and build confidence along with an appreciation of our world, and of living together in peace.

Each book set will come with an activity guide that is designed to integrate the book into learning activities. It is assumed that teachers and parents will adapt each activity to fit the needs and abilities of their child or student. All of the activities are created in conjunction with relevant content standards in ELA, math, science, social studies, and art.

We look forward to working with you and learning how we can extend the learning for your students and families.

Sincerely,

Child's Play

Board books - English and bilingual editions

This set of sturdy first books are perfect for babies, toddlers and early learners to explore by themselves or to be read to. Reading early and introducing language to young children will help them recognize sounds and word association. This recognition will build their vocabulary, speech, comprehension skills, sensory stimulation, and their intelligence.

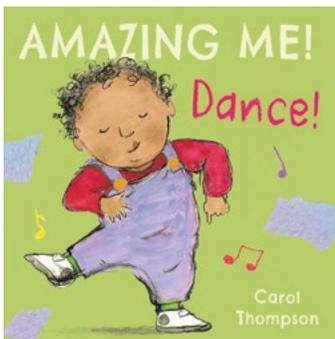

The best books tell a simple story with few or no words, allowing readers to invent their own. The illustrations are crisp and clear, with limited images on each page. These books will stand the test of time not only in being indestructible, but also in holding children's interest as they explore and point to pictures, exclaiming, "again, again!" when reaching the last page.

Classic Books with Holes

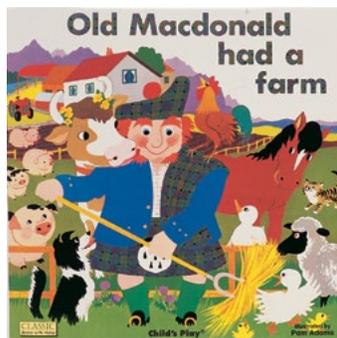

All children love to rhyme and sing. As parents and caregivers, we know that rhyming teaches children how language works and also helps children notice the sounds within words. Children learn when to anticipate the rhyming word in the story, and they prepare to make a prediction when they read.

New Experiences

All children's brains are designed to learn, and to do this, they must first attend to, focus on, and then absorb new experiences. Learning is difficult without any one of these three steps. Reading these New Experiences books with a young child will help them with their understanding and make it a productive and enjoyable experience.

Social-Emotional Picture Books

Helping young children gain control of their emotions is a two-step process. First, they need to learn how to identify their emotions and then how to manage them through self-regulation. Identifying and managing our emotions as adults can be very difficult, but young children are still learning what emotions are and how to respond appropriately to everyday feelings like anger and sadness. As teachers and parents, it is our job to help young children understand and identify their feelings, as well as communicate those feelings effectively to others.

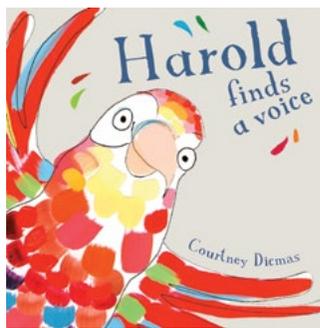

Age-appropriate books can be helpful tools when it comes to learning how to identify and manage feelings, actions, and emotions while nurturing their social-emotional development. After the books are read, the caregiver can target each book by its subject matter easily by separating them into categories and using them when a situation arises to address the need. This is a great way to have concrete and visual ways to think about and express how the children are feeling at the time.
